THE DEMOCRACY DEFINED CAMPAIGN PHILOSOPHY ESSAY EIS#23

RADIOACTIVITY FROM CROPS FED WITH PHOSPHATE
'FERTILISER' IS THE PRINCIPAL CAUSE OF CANCER.

An Essay by Kenn d'Oudney.

According to statistics, cancer is one of the most frequent causes of early mortality in the population. On reading the information provided herein, it is easy to understand why.

That most cancers are caused by radioactivity in commercially-produced crops as a result of the misuse of rock phosphates as 'fertiliser', is indeed news to many people. Yet, information about radioactivity deriving from phosphates has circulated at the highest levels; viz. the endorsers of THE REPORT ISBN 9781902848204. Clinical studies by world respected academics and research institutions establish that radioactive elements are introduced into crops by cultivators.

It is a shock to learn that this knowledge of literally life-and-death significance is not merely ignored, but is to all intents premeditatedly buried by government and the corporately-owned and controlled mass media, and by state (mis)education. This essay is based on some of the information in Part One (of the seven parts) of THE REPORT, which may be referred to for full source attribution, further quoted material, and a large helpful bibliography. Endorsements of THE REPORT by academics, doctors and judges (U.S. & U.K.) are shown below.

DISCOVERY.

The discovery of radioactivity in phosphates was made by Vilma Hunt at Harvard University as long ago as 1964. Searching for sources of radioactivity in the environment, one day, not expecting any result, she checked a pack of cigarettes with a Geiger counter and was amazed to observe a spectacular reaction and reading. Research subsequently confirmed phosphates as the source.

DEMOCRACY DEFINED ESSAY EIS23

In 1990, U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop concurred with published studies, stating on U.S. national television that radioactivity in crops is source to cancers, explained as follows.

Plant-growth is stimulated by: nitrogen (N); potassium (K); and phosphorus (P). The latter comprises approximately 30 per cent of rock phosphates — but rock phosphates also contain naturally-occurring radioactive elements in profusion. In addition to copious quantities of uranium, the following radioactive elements present in rock phosphate ‘fertiliser’, are absorbed by crops and are subsequently ingested by humans and animals:

radium-226	radon-222
polonium-210	lead-210

To maximise profits from commercial agriculture, crops such as vegetables, staple food cereals, tobacco, and pasture for animals, are intensely grown using phosphates. In addition to the phosphorus, plants absorb the radioactive elements through their roots.

Hydroponics: it is due principally to the fact that phosphates are crushed and made soluble in water, that plants such as tomatoes, squash/courgettes, aubergines, etc., are viably grown — and contaminated — hydroponically, i.e. indoors, in water, with water-borne radioactive chemicals fed to the roots. This is perhaps the most efficient method of delivering radioactivity to a plant.

RADIATION AND DNA.

Amongst the types of radiation, ionising alpha radiation is long-established as especially causative of cancer and leukæmia, and it afflicts people with great harm in numerous other ways.

Human and animal bodies are made up of cells which replicate before ageing and dying off. DNA (molecular deoxyribonucleic acid) within the nucleus of cells is the genetic information ‘blueprint’ or ‘recipe’ from which cells replicate. Radiation represents a source of danger to humans and animals which they are not effectively equipped to resist.

Radioactivity interferes with DNA at the nuclear atomic and molecular level. When genetic information controlling cell replication is deformed, cells can over-replicate, grow into malignant tumours, and spread (metastasis).

Following the nuclear explosions at Hiroshima, Nagasaki and Chernobyl, the consequential disease of epidemic proportions in the nearby populations, was (and is) due principally to alpha radiation. The harm from radiation derived from phosphates, though not so easily understood and obvious as that which is associated with a nuclear explosion, can be nonetheless injurious and fatal. Scientists recognise the danger to living things from beta radiation emitted by lead-210, which has a radioactive half-life of 21 years. Alpha radiation can be twenty times more damaging.

RADIOACTIVITY IN FOOD

Consumption of any plants grown with phosphates in or out of doors, is a grave health risk. Doctor Edward Martell, a radio-chemist of the U.S. National Center for Atmospheric Research, in his paper published in Proceedings of the U.S. National Academy of Science, states that enough polonium-210 is absorbed by tobacco for alpha radiation from the polonium alone to be the cause of at least 95 per cent of lung cancer in tobacco smokers.

Radiation produces many other adverse conditions in the human, characterised by general ill-health and reduced immune-system efficiency; leukæmia; mental and physical handicaps and deformities; teratoma (congenital tumour); Siamese (conjoined) twins; teratogeny (production of infant mutant monsters); and birth defects. Infertility and teratogeny result from irradiation of DNA within sperm and ova. Unborn infants can receive pathogenic, leukæmogenic and carcinogenic doses of radioactivity via the mother's bloodstream.

Note that radiation, particularly the sun's ultraviolet light, is a cause of skin cancer.

RADIOACTIVE 'FERTILISER'.

Tobacco and other crops have been cultivated for many decades with the use of phosphates. Interestingly, the clinical evidence of official empirical* studies exonerates smoke-tar from carcinosis allegations and speculations. In addition to the polonium alone being responsible for causing up to, or more than, nine out of ten cases of lung cancer, the evidence demonstrates radiation as principal cause to all carcinosis in humans. The death-rate from lung cancer is the same from the smoking of low-tar as from high-tar cigarettes: hence, not the various chemicals in vegetative smoke-tar but radioactivity is confirmed as cause of the cancers; viz. UCLA School of Medicine Long-term Pulmonary Studies, 1969-1997; Donald P. Tashkin, M.D., Vol. 155, American Journal of Respiratory & Critical Care Medicine; U.S. National Institute of Health Study, Lancet, Sept., 1983, etc.

*Note: empirical, i.e. 'hands-on', actual use by human test subjects.

Whereas the accutely addictive substance nicotine in tobacco can cause constriction of the pulmonary system (lungs) and Buerger's Disease (constriction of the vascular system, which can lead to gangrene and amputation of limbs), the smoke-tar itself is exonerated of carcinogens. It is not the plant's naturally-occurring smoke-tar chemicals, but radiation which is confirmed as the cause of cancers in tobacco smokers. Research by Beverly Cohen and Naomi Harley, of New York University Medical Center, established that tobacco smokers who give up, have five years later almost as much lower lung radioactivity as do active tobacco smokers.

Radioactive elements within non-smokers derive from food crops cultivated in soil poisoned by phosphates. Radio-isotopes are conveyed by the bloodstream to all parts of the body, accumulating in breasts, prostate and sex glands, liver, bone marrow, kidneys, lymph nodes, pancreas, and thyroid.

DEMOCRACY DEFINED ESSAY EIS23

‘Unaccountable’ and much wrongly-attributed pathogeny results from radioactivity in our food.

Significantly, the most common incidence of malignant tumours and cancer occurs within the bowels and stomach, accounting for 24 per cent of diseased organ location.

While circulating in the bloodstream, the radiation is further indicated to cause cardio-vascular degeneration and associated disease, coronaries and stroke. Calcified blood plaques of sufferers of arteriosclerosis (hardened arteries) have been shown to contain polonium-210 and lead-210. The huge number of people who contract cancers, including those who never smoke, is explicated by the radioactive aspect of phosphates.

RADIOACTIVE ‘ORGANIC’ OR ‘BIO’ FOOD.

Radioactive phosphates are used to boost crop growth in commercial food production worldwide, a big business the greater part of which is controlled by a minority of giant corporations.

Definition. Organic:

- (i) in Chemistry, the chemistry of carbon compounds;
- (ii) in horti- and agriculture, crops produced using fertilisers and pesticides exclusively of carbonic plant or animal origin.

Food sold as ‘ORGANIC’ or ‘BIO’ can be intensely radioactive: farmers using rock phosphates duplicitously define themselves and their produce as “organic” — because rock phosphates come from “naturally-occurring” rather than manufactured sources. In this way, commercial producers of food mislead their buying public into believing that their food is ‘organically’ produced. However, genuine organic fertilisers only derive from carbon-based sources; for example, guano, manure, hoof and horn, dried blood, soot, bonemeal, fishmeal, and woodash — not from rock phosphates.

Farmers rely on phosphates and manure spread on the land to produce crops of pasture and animal feed, with the result that the feed, the subsequent ‘manure’ derived from the animals, the ‘food’, that is, the flesh of carcasses of cows, sheep, chickens, etc., and the milk, cheese and dairy products, can contain deadly radioactive carcinogens and pathogens.

THE REPORT.

THE REPORT ISBN 9781902848204 collates the Findings of Fact which establish that radioactivity in crops is caused by phosphates being misused as ‘fertiliser’. THE REPORT has circulated at the highest levels. Those in the ‘upper reaches’ of society know about these matters and take precautions to protect themselves. For example, to provide food for the household of the late multi-billionaire James Goldsmith, 80 separate acres were cultivated using only organic fertilisers.

Researching health issues is comprised of first-hand empirical clinical and laboratory techniques, results of which are then published as textbooks or recorded as academic and scientific papers. If people referred for their knowledge to the studies which explain how cancer can be caused by radioactivity in phosphates, such important information would not be “news” to them. It is literally a lethal mistake for people to believe most of what is carefully chosen money-motivated mendacity put out about cancer by the corporate-owned mass media.

In full knowledge of the radiation in phosphates, with complete impunity, corporations and owned subsidiaries import the phosphates, own and work the farmland, distribute, market and advertise the produce, and own the hyper- and supermarkets where it is sold. As a result of their motivation to maximise profits, it is a premeditated certainty that radioactivity is inserted into the bodies of the mass urban populations of humans, killing many, and causing grievous harm to innumerable others.

Cheap rock phosphates are spread every year onto the food-producing grasslands of Europe, the Steppes of Russia, the Prairies of America, and throughout Asia, Australia, Africa and South America. If the equivalent of only one-hundredth part of one per cent of the radioactivity spread every year onto the Prairies, escaped by accident from a nuclear facility, there would be a resounding hue and cry from the mass media, politicians and parties, and the pseudo-green groups. (Viz: the mishap at Three Mile Island nuclear power station.) There would also be severe incrimination of the culprits.

Yet, the money-motivated ruin by phosphates of all the world’s prime farmlands with many hundreds of thousands of consequential annual human mortalities, has the tacit consent of the press and pretentious corporate-funded ‘green’ and ‘conservation’ groups, and has been, and is, knowingly permitted and thus abetted by judicable* politicians.

Definition.* judicable, that which may be tried by jury in a court of law.

PLUTOCRACY AND EARLY MORTALITY.

As cancer is a widespread cause of early mortality in the population, the question must be asked as to why government and mass media do not report on these crucial matters truthfully? Owners of the implacable multi-national and national pharmaceutical manufacturers are financially linked with the central and other banks and finance houses, the oil and petro-chemical corporations, the armaments and auto industries, the alcohol and caffeinated beverage businesses, the tobacco cultivators and traders, and other manufacturing, agricultural, retail and service companies, newspapers, publishing, press, radio, television and advertising companies.

The Owners’ pharmaceutical (and other) companies now are huge, highly diversified conglomerates with heavily financed effective political lobbies controlling the deliberations of bureaucrats, and deciding for those politicians who comprise our Western ‘governments’. The money-motivations of a ruthless, criminal owning-clique find expression in a de facto coup d’état: plutocracy* displaces democracy.

* Definition. plutocracy, government by the wealthiest members of society.

DEMOCRACY DEFINED ESSAY EIS23

The pharmaceutical and 'health-care' companies operate within a crooked framework conspired to protect their Owners' hegemony and profits; the ill-gotten gains of a lawless, racketeering homicidal minority. The corrupt system is politically machinated by subservient self-seeking career politicians and the main parties in the financial interests of a behind-the-scenes, numerically miniscule fraction of the population. This is at the expense and to the destruction of the health, freedom and rights of all of the rest of the People.

The same persons who in effect poison your food also make an ongoing fortune (trillions) out of selling the chemo-therapy and drugs to 'treat' men and women as they suffer an excruciating death. These corporations have a monumental vested interest in causing cancer throughout the world's population. Obviously, the Owners and their financial interests do not permit the spreading of this information by their mainstream outlets and their unconscionable servitors in politics and the judiciary.

In the absence of circulation of this information by government, state education and the media, all responsible citizens realise that it is for us, "We the People," to spread the knowledge in every way that we can. Ask yourself, if the public at large who are at present manipulated by misinformation, knew of these facts, what do you think they would do? Read more in THE REPORT.
